Read the passage below carefully and answer questions 26-39.

In Kenya's Nyandarua region sits a village called Jaa that was hit by a long and harsh drought several years ago. Food and water began to run out. Crops and animals perished and life was really hard for all to survive. Out of the great suffering, villagers set out to the foot of Mt. Kenya to appease their gods. They offered animal sacrifices and waited hopefully for the rains.

The solution came early one morning. Maitu, a poor farmer, was tilling her farm, trying to find something in the barren land. She stumbled on a large pot containing a few grains of beans. She was surprised but carried it back home to cook a meal for the family. To her joy, the pot kept bubbling and delicious food poured out of the pot. Once the family had their fill, they saw the pot still overflowed with food.

Maitu and her husband decided to share the food with the villagers since they were also hunger stricken. They called the rest of the neighbours and shared the food with them. Each person took as much as they needed and carefully saved the rest for the others. The villagers were overjoyed and thanked them sincerely. It went on like this for some days and though times were still tough, the villagers at least had food for themselves and their animals.

But soon the villagers became greedy. Instead of taking only what they needed and sharing equally, some began to take away huge portions. They began to waste food and only threw leftovers to animals. They stopped viewing the pot as a blessing in difficult times. The couple began to worry that they would be punished for the ungrateful behaviour and devised a clever plan to teach them a lesson.

The next day when the villagers arrived at Maitu's house expecting their usual bounty of food, they were greeted by sad faces of Maitu's family. In a moment, Maitu said that the pot was empty and had stopped producing food. The villagers were shocked and wondered what to do. They all returned home hungry. This continued for a few days, until the villagers began to rue their rash actions and realized the value of the pot. For days they became weak and could hardly walk. They wished they were less wasteful.

Maitu and her family pitied them, but only gave them food from the pot again after they were sure the villagers had learnt a lesson and would be less greedy. From that day on, the villagers did not waste food. It was not long before the rains came and the village was prosperous once more. The villagers went back to the foot of the mountain to pray and thank their gods on the blessing of rain.

Read the following passage carefully and then answer questions 40 - 50.

People who lack the ability to hear are said to be deaf. Deafness is also referred to as hearing impairment which can either be total or partial. People who begin to go deaf in adult life have different problems from those who are born with a hearing impairment. They have to learn different ways of behaving and different ways of communicating, perhaps at a time when learning is not at all easy.

Such people have to learn how to use a hearing aid although the device is not a complete solution to their problem. The sound perceived by the hearing impaired person through the hearing aid is distorted and appears to have more background noise than is heard by someone with normal hearing. In addition, the hearing impaired have to look at the movement of the speaker's lips in order to understand what the speaker is saying. This is called lip reading. Lip reading is difficult; it demands intense concentration, and an uninterrupted direct view of the speaker's face. No other activities can take place at the same time: the lip reader has to stop eating, stop washing up, stop mending, stop everything in order to concentrate on 'hearing'. This may make them appear stupid to the ignorant. However, it is not a question of stupidity, but a way of ensuring that the lip reader does not misunderstand the message. Imagine what it is like trying to communicate to someone in a very noisy classroom. Frustrating, isn't it?

The hearing impaired have to face that all the time. A useful way of looking at the problem is to see the hearing impaired person as a foreigner and to treat him or her as if you were in a foreign country. This means that you have to speak more clearly and to raise your voice lightly. You have to use gestures in order to make your meaning clear and also to be ready to use pencil and paper to be absolutely certain. It is also important to make sure that you do not obscure your mouth with your hand or any object.

Another point quite forgotten is that a hearing aid may be quite useful in a quiet room. But try it on a busy street, in a noisy market, bus or classroom and you have a really difficult problem distinguishing speech. So do not suggest to or even encourage hearing impaired people to go to functions which are going to make disability appear worse and thus increase their sense of failure. This does not mean that the hearing impaired should be cut off from social activities. On the contrary, you can carefully select for them entertainment places with good sound systems. Also choose the best seating locations so that their hearing is enhanced rather than hindered. Making sure that the people talking are clearly seen will also help.
