Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 38.

The buffalo deserves his reputation as one of the most dangerous animals. For ages past, he has been hunted by natives of Africa for his delicious meat and tough hide which can be made into solid shields. With the white man's arrival, he has been hunted for his long horns which people like to keep as trophies. Naturally the animal, which was unsuspecting at the beginning, became alert and savage. It has learnt to attack swiftly and unexpectedly and with great strength. It has learnt to use all the advantages, which the difficult countryside gives it and often the hunter does not see it until he is very close to it and almost too late to defend himself. Nevertheless, in spite of all these qualities, I am sure that the buffalo, like the elephant and other wild animals has not always hated men. That enmity, I am sure is the result of sad experiences with the men who have always been enemies of wildlife.

When the buffalo is in bad temper, he may attack without the least reason of course. There are various causes of this bad temper and some may not be known to me. However, an old irritating wound, an internal disease and the interruption of his afternoon are three of the most common reasons for his savage behaviour. He is dangerous in yet another way. Of all African animals, the buffalo is the only one which, when wounded, pursued or attacked by man leaves his tracks, lies in ambush and charges from the side or back, at close quarters. Many hunters have lost their lives through this method of attack.

26. When he is in bad temper, the buffalo will _____
 A. lie in ambush
 B. attack without cause
 C. attack only from close quarters

29. What makes the buffalo to lie in ambush?
 A. To attack from side or back at close quarters
 B. To escape from hunters
 C. To look for food
 D. To change its course and rest.
30. What makes the buffalo bad tempered?
 A. Many things some of which we do not know
 B. There are only three things which irritate him.
 C. He is bad tempered only when wounded
 D. He is bad tempered if he is healthy and not diseased
31. The buffalo is the enemy of man because
 A. he is often in bad temper
 B. he naturally has bad qualities
 C. he has experienced man's cruelty

Read the following passage carefully and then answer questions 39 - 50.

When Kagendo joined a boarding school, she found life very different from her former school. Every morning their games master Mr Ngoko, would wake the girls up at six o'clock in order to attend keep fit exercises. The girls would struggle to get out of school.

Kagendo found the keep fit exercises hard at first because she had never participated in any before. She was amazed at how the other girls were doing the exercises with a lot of ease and enjoyment. The fun with which the girls did the exercises made Kagendo wonder whether they were the same girls who found it hard to make up!

By the end of the keep fit session the girls would head back to their dormitories. They would then take a shower while chatting excitedly. After this, the girls would be ready to start the day feeling free and relaxed. Kagendo was impressed and she promised herself that she would be fully involved so that she can exercise as well as her teacher, Miss Obiero. Within no time Kagendo was very good in keep fit exercises because she used every opportunity that she had free to practise. She realised that the exercises made her healthy, strong and relaxed her overworked mind.

By the time Kagendo left school she had become an expert in keep fit exercises. She enrolled herself at a health club where she was later employed as a fitness instructor.
